ABSTRACT

Information is provided on U.S. summer learning offerings, such as courses, institutes, and workshops, that are open to foreign nationals but about which information is hard to find. While many of the courses and programs are strictly academic, others provide a cultural orientation to the United States, and some mix academic or vocational training with recreation. Questionnaires were sent to about 2,600 professional associations, 2,900 colleges and universities, and 600 trade and technical schools. The programs are divided into 15 fields of study, as well as subfields. For each program, information is provided on: the program title, the sponsor, location, subject matter, dates and/or duration of the program, methods of instruction, credits offered, services for foreign nationals, enrollments, eligibility, costs, scholarships, type of housing offered, and contact person. An introductory section covers: U.S. government regulations affecting foreign nationals, arrival and travel in the United States, housing and hospitality, and costs and scholarships. Also provided is information on U.S. service organizations that provide housing, study programs, counseling, information services, and publications. A six-page annotated bibliography and sponsor and state indexes are included. (SW)

INTRODUCTION

During the summer months U.S. colleges and universities offer special courses, institutes, and workshops geared to students and professionals in addition to their standard courses. Many trade and technical schools and professional associations also offer special programs in all fields of study. While many of these courses and programs are strictly academic, others provide a cultural orientation to the United States, and some mix academic or vocational training with recreation.

In undertaking Summer Learning Options U.S.A., the Institute of International Education (IIE) recognized that information on standard summer courses is readily available in the catalogs of individual colleges and universities. Therefore, it was decided to focus only on those courses, institutes, and workshops that are open to foreign nationals but about which information is hard to find.

Information for this book was obtained from surveys conducted by IIE in late December 1982. Questionnaires were sent to all accredited U.S. colleges and universities, trade and technical schools, and professional associations. IIE contacted approximately 2,600 professional associations, 2,900 colleges and universities, and 600 trade and technical schools.

Some of the institutions reported that they can design programs to meet individual needs if requested by a group or individuals. Programs of this nature are not included in this directory. Those interested in such tailored courses should contact specific institutions directly. In addition, some 300 colleges and universities offer intensive English-language training programs during the summer. Descriptions of these programs are listed in IIE's biennial English Language and Orientation Programs in the United States. (To order, see p. 128.)

GOVERNMENT REGULATIONS

All foreign nationals except Canadians need a passport issued by their own government and a visa issued by a U.S. embassy or consulate to enter the United States.

Foreign nationals who travel to the United States to become full-time students generally qualify for an F-1 or "foreign student" visa. To obtain an F-1 visa, the prospective student must present to a U.S. consular officer evidence of acceptance as a full-time student by a recognized U.S. school or special education program, evidence of good health, and evidence of adequate financial support to cover expenses for the proposed period of study. Form I-20A, "Certificate of Eligibility for Non-Immigrant Student Status," which is issued by a U.S. school or special education program, is sufficient evidence of acceptance.

Some U.S. colleges and universities may issue a Form I-20 for their summer study programs. Foreign nationals currently holding an F-1 visa may enroll in a summer program at another school without obtaining a Form I-20 provided that they plan to return to their present institution after taking the summer course. In this case, students are not required to notify the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service of the temporary transfer.

Students who come to the United States under certain grant or scholarship programs may qualify for a J-1 or "exchange visitor" visa. In order to obtain a J-1 visa for entry into the United States, students must present Form IAP-66, "Certificate of Eligibility for Exchange Visitor Status," obtainable from the sponsor of the grant. Sponsors may be educational, private, or government organizations.

Students enrolling in a vocational training institution (other than English-language training) may apply for an M-1 visa to enter the United States by presenting Form I-20M to the U.S. consular officer. An M-1 student is eligible to remain in the United States for the duration of a vocational training course or for one year, whichever is less. An M-1 student, however, can neither change educational objective nor convert to F-1 status.

Often, foreign nationals coming to the United States solely for a short-term educational program may qualify for a B-1 or "temporary visitor for business" visa. In this instance the sponsor of the short-term course must write a letter stating that this program offers training for a specific business or trade.

In addition to these U.S. regulations, there may be various regulations in applicants' home countries that affect their traveling to the United States. These should be investigated early. Applicants should ask at a U.S. consulate about specific visa requirements when they begin to plan summer study in the United States. They will not, however, be granted a visa until they receive documentation from a U.S. organization showing they have been accepted by a summer program.

PRACTICAL INFORMATION FOR FOREIGN VISITORS

Foreign nationals may find general information about academic and nonacademic life in the United States in IIE's Practical Guide for Foreign Visitors. It contains information about U.S. higher education, educational and living costs, and social and recreational activities. Although this book is not written specifically with summer study in mind, it does contain much useful information for summer visitors. The book may be purchased through IIE for $3.50. (To order, see p. 128.)

A publication specifically designed for the foreign visitor is Living in the U.S.A. (See the Bibliography for details of all books mentioned in the Introduction.) This book discusses U.S. customs and culture and provides practical information on climate, food, money, health, and housing.

The College Board publishes two useful booklets: Entering Higher Education in the United States provides general information about U.S. higher education, including advice on application procedures; Financial Planning for Study in the United States provides information on costs of study and living expenses. Some or all of these books may be consulted at counseling centers overseas such as offices of IIE, the U.S. Information Service (USIS), and the Fulbright Binational Commission.

Arrival in the United States

If notified in advance, the International Student Service (ISS) will meet students at ports of entry in 18 cities across the United States. Representatives from ISS meet students at their ships or planes, help them make travel arrangements, find overnight accommodation at their port of entry, and provide various other services upon request. Any student from overseas who plans to arrive at a major port of entry and who wishes to be met should contact the International Student Service (see p. 126) well in advance of their arrival. The Travelers' Aid—International Social Service of America (see p. 127) performs the same service at steamship piers, airports, and large railway and bus stations. Neither organization charges a fee for this service.

Travel

Most costs listed in this directory do not include travel expenses to the site of the course. Arrangements for travel to the United States should be made at least a month before departure. If the program is a long one, it is a good idea to arrive at least one week before classes begin in order to become accustomed to new surroundings and arrange for housing.

To learn about local points of interest and tourist attractions, visitors can contact a travel agent, chamber of commerce, city council, mayor's office, or library of a town or city. It should be remembered, however, that summer is the prime vacation season in the United States and lodging may be scarce—and expensive. Summer in the United States also brings many seasonal events. Chambers of commerce publish guides to such events in their state.

Special rates are available to foreign visitors for travel within the United States. The Greyhound bus company's "Ameripass" and Trailway's "Eaglepass" offer unlimited travel by bus at a fixed rate for a specified period. The rates are about $190 for seven days, $240 for 15 days, and $347 for one month. Ameripass is available from the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE—see p. 126) and both Ameripass and Eaglepass may be purchased from travel agents or from the bus companies. Amtrak, the National Railroad Passenger Corporation, sells an unlimited-travel U.S.A. rail pass to foreign visitors only. The rates are $250 for one week, $375 for two weeks, $500 for three weeks, and $625 for one month. CIEE's book, Where to Stay USA: From $3 to $25 a night, is a necessity for any foreign visitor who wants to spend some time traveling within the United States.

Travel for the physically disabled

The U.S. Department of Transportation (Washington, D.C. 20591) and the U.S. Travel Service (U.S. Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C. 20230) and similar organizations provide information about travel for the handicapped.

TravelAbility: A guide for physically disabled travelers in the U.S., one of several books for the disabled, has information about travel agents who specialize in dealing with the disabled and provides listings of hotels with facilities for disabled persons.

Disabled travelers should make reservations well in advance and inform reservations clerks if they need special assistance. It is wise for handicapped travelers to arrive at travel terminals earlier than the normally suggested check-in time.

The International Student I.D. Card

The International Student I.D. (identity) Card grants card holders certain benefits, such as discounts in hotels, motels, restaurants, theaters, bookstores, record shops, clothing stores, museums, and cinemas. The amount of the discount varies. The International Student I.D. Card may be obtained for a nominal fee from nonprofit travel organizations affiliated with the International Student Travel Conference (ISTC). ISTC and CIEE offices are listed in the 1983 Student Travel Catalog, available free from CIEE.

Housing and hospitality

Many of the programs in this book either arrange housing for their participants or help to find housing. Participants may be housed in college or university residence halls, called dormitories, or apartments that are owned and operated by the school. They may also be housed in apartments, furnished rooms, or hotels. There is generally one fee for a room and an additional fee for meals. Entries in this book note whether housing is provided in a program and the type of housing provided.

Participants who wish to live with a family during their stay should contact one of the organizations that arrange homestay programs for foreign nationals. Descriptions of such organizations can be found in the Appendix.

If housing is not provided, there are several alternative sources of housing. Young Men's Christian Associations (YMCAs) and Young Women's Christian Associations (YWCAs) are organizations that frequently provide low-cost housing. YM and YWCAs are nondenominational, despite their names, and often provide sports and recreational facilities and inexpensive restaurants in addition to lodging. Information on these accommodations may be found in the booklet "The Y's Way to Visit the USA and Canada."

An International House is a special residence where both international and U.S. students live. These houses are located in several major cities. Although many of them admit students only for the full academic year, some may house students during the summer. Even if there is no available space, an International House can usually be relied on to help visitors adjust to a strange city and may invite visitors to social activities.

There are several books that furnish housing and hospitality information. CIEE's guide, Where to Stay USA: From $3 to $25 a night, gives information on alternative accommodations, such as youth hostels and low-cost motels. In addition, the book features a state-by-state guide for foreign visitors. Michael Frome's Hosteling USA provides information on hostels and a state-by-state guide to planning a hotel trip. The Hotel and Motel Red Book, issued annually, is the official directory of the American Hotel and Motel Association. It includes a state-by-state listing of hotels, motels, and resorts in the United States and is useful for planning travel around the country.

Organizations that provide services for local foreign nationals can be found in some major cities of the United States, such as New York, Boston, Chicago, and Philadelphia. New York's Metro-International, 356 West 34th Street, New York, New York 10001, formed with the cooperation of 85 colleges and universities and international service agencies in the area, helps thousands of international students deal with the problems of living and studying in New York City.

The World Affairs Council of Boston, Curtis-Saval International Center, 22 Batterymarch Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02109, provides resources for visiting students and scholars in Boston-area institutions. Similar organizations include the International Visitors Center of Chicago, 116 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois 60603, and International House of Philadelphia, 3701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104.

Costs and scholarships

There are several variables that determine how high or low the cost of a program will be. The greater the services included in the total cost of a program, the higher that cost is likely to be. For example, if meals and housing are included, the cost will of course be higher. Conversely, if the price includes only tuition, the amount listed will be lower. For example, the six-week program that costs $1,200 but includes books, materials, meals, housing, and health insurance is likely to be less expensive than the program that costs $600 for tuition only.

If the program cost does not include food and housing, then students must estimate their personal expenses and plan their finances accordingly. Housing in hotels is usually more expensive than housing in dormitories or apartments, because hotels usually charge a daily rate. Housing in dormitories is often less expensive and more convenient but probably is not available if a program is sponsored by a trade or technical school or a professional association. Apartments are often difficult to find, expensive, and usually impractical for short periods of study. The Institute of International Education's annual publication, Costs at U.S. Educational Institutions, lists approximate monthly living expenses for students in the United States. These estimates include room, board, and incidentals and make no distinction between on- and off-campus living. For example, the average monthly living expense at an urban Eastern university is about $605, while a student attending a technical school program in the rural South will need approximately $520 per month. This guide is helpful for foreign nationals who have little knowledge of the area where they will live and study.

Financial assistance for foreign nationals is very limited. An award might be a partial or full scholarship or a work-study grant. Available scholarships are listed in the entries that follow.

PROGRAMS

ENTRY INFORMATION

Programs are divided into 15 fields of study. Each field is designated a letter. Where there are subdivisions within fields, each subfield is designated a number. (The letters and numbers for each field and each subfield are listed in the table of contents and at the beginning of each section.) So, for example, K5 designates programs in the fifth subfield (international business) within field K, management and business. Within subfields programs are arranged and numbered alphabetically by sponsor.

Each entry relays information provided for IIE by program sponsors. The information is set out as follows:

1. CODE LETTER AND NUMBER. These are used in the indexes to designate programs.
2. SPONSOR'S NAME. Sponsors include colleges, universities, technical schools, and professional associations (organizations in particular fields that offer courses relevant to their field).
3. LOCATION. The city and state in which the program is held. This may differ from the location of the sponsoring organization. Programs in several locations are listed as "various."
4. PROGRAM TITLE. Some programs have no specific title.
5. SPECIALIZATION. These are the specific subjects that the program focuses on.
6. DATES. Either the dates of the beginning and end of sessions or the duration of sessions and the period over which they are offered (e.g., "May to July, 2 weeks each").
7. INSTRUCTION. The methods of instruction (e.g., seminars, lectures) and by whom instruction is given (university faculty, industry resources, etc.).
8. HIGHLIGHTS. Some or all of the following will be included in the order given here: the year the sponsor first offered this program or the year the sponsor began offering summer programs; if the program will be offered in 1984; if credits or certificates are available; visa assistance and services for foreign nationals offered; the number of students enrolled; the percentage of enrollment that is foreign; the availability of evaluations from previous years; and any special features the sponsor wished to emphasize.
9. ELIGIBILITY. The academic, professional, and English-language standards required of applicants.
10. COSTS. The cost of the program and what it covers—tuition, housing, meals, books, local transportation, or health insurance. If the cost covers all these, the term "inclusive" is used.
11. SCHOLARSHIPS. The availability of scholarships or work-study.
12. HOUSING. The type of housing offered or, when housing is not provided, if the sponsor assists in locating housing.
13. APPLICATION. The deadline for application, the fee or deposit required of applicants, and, if any, the scholarship application deadline.
14. CONTACT. The person to contact for information and application. Please do not send applications or requests for information to IIE.

Terms. "NA" means that this category is not applicable to this program. "Not given" means that the sponsor did not provide the necessary information.

SERVICE ORGANIZATIONS

Foreign nationals studying in the United States, even for short periods, may need more information than this directory provides. There are many organizations in the United States that provide information on housing, study, and practical training. Some organizations will provide housing for short periods; others sponsor their own programs. Many have counseling and information services, some issue their own publications, and a few will meet arriving foreign students at their point of entry. The following is a list of such service organizations in the United States:

AIESEC (International Association of Students in Economics and Business Management)
622 Third Avenue, New York, New York 10017 Cable: NYAIESEC

An international organization devoted to paid internships, seminar training programs, global management, and leadership development. It has world headquarters in Belgium and a U.S. office in New York City. The student-run, nonprofit organization identifies and trains a select group of students in business and related fields. AIESEC places over 30,000 students at 400 universities in 58 countries. In the United States, AIESEC committees are located at 63 affiliated institutions. AIESEC makes visa, insurance, housing, transportation, and social arrangements for its trainees.

AFS International/Intercultural Programs (formerly American Field Service)
313 East 43d Street, New York, New York 10017 Cable: AFSWORLD, N.Y. Telex 424031

A nonprofit organization offering opportunities for U.S. families to host students from different countries and arranging homestay programs for U.S. students abroad. Students between the ages of 16 and 18 live for a semester, full year, or summer with families, attend school, and participate in the activities of their host communities.

American Institute for Foreign Study
102 Greenwich Avenue, Greenwich, Connecticut 06830 Telex: 965932

AIFS organizes "Camp America," which brings Europeans to the United States to work as camp counselors; "Summer in America," which organizes summer homestays for foreign nationals; and "Academic Year in America" for foreign students.

American Youth Hostels
Delaplane, Virginia 22025

A nonprofit, nonsectarian, nonpolitical organization operating more than 4,500 hostels in 49 countries. It provides overnight accommodations for between $.90 to $3.50 per night. Membership in AYH is required. Each hostel has its own rules, and hostelers should refer to Hosteling USA: The official American Youth Hostels handbook for specific details on overnight fees, customs, etc. AYH also provides travel services, group trips, and low-cost air, rail, and auto transportation.

Association for International Practical Training
217 American City Building, Columbia, Maryland 21044 Telex: 4422029

A nonprofit, educational exchange organization concerned with arranging on-the-job practical training. Its program and services include placing trainees from other countries with employers in the United States and placing U.S. trainees with employers abroad.

Council on International Educational Exchange
205 East 42d Street, New York, New York 10017 Telex: 423227

Provides counseling and information services; publishes brochures and books; organizes conferences, seminars, workshops; and provides assistance to individuals, colleges, universities, and other organizations on matters of international education. CIEE has offices in Berkeley, California; Boston; Los Angeles; Miami, Florida; New York City; San Diego; San Francisco; Seattle; Paris; and Tokyo.

Experiment in International Living
10 Kipling Road, Brattleboro, Vermont 05301

An organization promoting global understanding between the nations of the world through travel, language training, cross-cultural orientation, and homestays. It offers educational programs in the United States for foreign nationals and summer and semester abroad programs for U.S. secondary school and college students.

Foreign Student Service Council
1623 Belmont Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009

FSSC arranges three-day homestays, dinner and holiday visits in area homes, open houses at FSSC headquarters, sightseeing, professional appointments, and other general assistance. The Council issues the International Student I.D. Card and provides this as a convenience for both U.S. and international students. Provides a referral function for students to the appropriate organizations dealing with financial aid, scholarship, travel-oriented inquiries, housing in Washington, D.C., and other U.S. cities, and exchange programs.

Institute of International Education
809 United Nations Plaza, New York, New York 10017 Cable INTERED Telex: 422207

A source of information on educational exchange in the United States and abroad. It distributes over 60,000 publications annually, including basic guides for both U.S. and foreign students, and it provides professional services to study abroad advisers, foreign student advisers, and admissions officers on campus. Through its worldwide network of offices, IIE counsels and provides information services to over 150,000 students each year both in the United States and abroad. IIE has offices in Atlanta, Chicago, Denver, Houston, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., Bangkok, Hong Kong, and Mexico City.

International Student Service
225 Park Avenue South, Suite 730, New York, New York 10003 Cable: FORSTUDENT Telex: ISS620675

ISS sponsors the "Arrival Program," which meets foreign students upon request at their U.S. port of entry; the "International Camp Counselor Program," where young people from abroad work as counselors in the United States; and various homestay and exchange programs.

Meridian House International
1630 Crescent Place, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009

Meridian House offers an orientation to the United States for visitors who are sponsored by the U.S. government, foreign governments, or private organizations; seminars on U.S. education and political systems and improving cross-cultural skills in U.S. society; homestays; and tours of Washington, D.C. It conducts a five-day orientation program that acquaints foreign visitors with the U.S. way of life and culture.

National Council for International Visitors
1630 Crescent Place, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009

NCIV is an organization with affiliates throughout the United States that provide language and program assistance, sightseeing escorts, hotel and arrival services, home hospitality, professional appointments, and other help as the need arises. International visitors may be sponsored through any of the many educational, training, or cultural exchange programs, and must be interested in participating in community programs.

Travelers' Aid–International Social Service of America
345 East 46th Street, New York, New York 10017

A counseling and referral service for emergencies that contacts the appropriate city, state, or federal agency for help. On-the-spot financial assistance for housing, clothing, food, medicine, transportation, and communication. It offers assistance with explicit directions on accommodations, transportation, and general help.

U.S. Servas Committee
11 John Street, Room 406, New York, New York 10038

For members, U.S. Servas provides two- and three-day homestays for foreign visitors in the United States and a similar service for U.S. students and travelers abroad. Servas's headquarters are in Liverpool, England. It has offices in many countries around the world.

Youth for Understanding
3501 Newark Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20016 Telex: 892569

Youth for Understanding sponsors, develops, and implements international student exchange programs for 15- to 18-year-olds. Programs last from two months to one year with host families in both the United States and abroad.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

This annotated bibliography lists publications that may assist foreign nationals planning short-term study in the United States. Many of these publications provide information useful for planning for study in the United States, while others provide specific information about fields of study, training and short-term study opportunities, and travel in the United States.

Many of these publications are available in the United States in college, university, or major public libraries. In other countries, they may be consulted at counseling centers and in IIE's overseas offices in Bangkok, Hong Kong, and Mexico City.

If you wish to buy any of these books or any of the books mentioned elsewhere in Summer Learning Options U.S.A., please write to the publisher, not to IIE. For books published by IIE,

ABOUT IIE

The Institute of International Education (IIE) is the oldest, largest, and most active educational exchange agency in the United States.

IIE administers educational programs sponsored by governments, foundations, corporations, universities, and international organizations. Each year it assists nearly 9,000 men and women through these sponsored programs and its international-host activities. IIE contributor-supported educational services — information, counseling, publications, and scholarships — help another 200,000 people annually. Contributions to IIE are tax deductible. To find out more about IIE, contact its nearest office.
